STORM WREAKS HAVOC IN SECTIONS OF COUNTY

Man Injured; Houses and Barns Upset and Unroofed

SEEMED LIKE TORNADO

The most destructive storm in many years swept over portions of Centre County last Sunday afternoon, injuring two persons, wrecking one or more homes and a number of barns, uprooting or breaking down countless fruit and shade trees and causing untold damage of various other kinds. Because of its intensity covering a period of only a few minutes, many persons believed it to have been a tornado. Entering Centre County from the WarriorsMark section, the storm seemed to travel over and largely confine itself to a stretch about one hundred yards wide, and at times several miles in length. The path of the storm was not continuous, however. State College and Penns Valley in a larger sense, and Brush Valley in isolated cases, marked the sections of the county effected.

Edward Watkins was painfully but not seriously injured when his farmhouse at Millbrook, between Lemont and State College, was blown over by the storm. A stove nearby which he had been seated was hurled against his back. He was removed to the Centre County hospital and his injuries dressed.

One of the saddest and most disastrous features of the storm was enacted at the Watkins home. Mrs. Watkins had left early in the afternoon to call on a neighbor. She decided to return when the storm had become quite severe so that she might be with her children. She crossed the fields just in time to see her house picked up and hurled some distance landing in a pit of and old foundation. Running to the home she discovered that it had taken fire from an overturned stove. She entered through a window, extinguished the flames and released her husband who with a child under him was pinned underneath the fallen stove. Mr. Watkins was unconscious. He was badly cut and bruised about the back and chest. He was assisted by his wife to the outside where he lay on the ground, while she entered the house again to rescue the four other children, whose escape had been blocked by a table which had overturned on them. With much difficulty they were freed and taken outside, where the storm was raging with such intensity that the clothing was torn from their backs. One by one she dragged her husband and children to a nearby farmhouse where they were cared for. The storm destroyed their home and furniture, in fact all their worldly possessions.

The roof of the Keller garage at State College was badly damaged. The State College orchard was partly in the path of the storm and a large number of fruit trees were destroyed.

Several barns on the Penna. State College farms were unroofed.

In Penns Valley the roof was blown off a house occupied by the Robert Smith family, on the James Goodhart farm. The barn on the farm also was unroofed. The roof was swept off the barn at the Lloyd Smith farm a short distance from the Robert Smith home, and every outbuilding, except a corncrib, was knocked down.

The only damage reported from Nittany Valley was at one of the Andrews farms, where the roof was torn off a large barn. The farm is tenanted by Clyde Corman.

The Jesse Klinger home nearby Lemont, was unroofed.

The storm uprooted a number of large trees at the Evergreen park near State College.

At Tyrone the heaviest damage to property was in the vicinity of the Pennsylvania railroad station. The roof was lifted off the passenger station and deposited below the Gillam Brothers wholesale house. The fine was knocked off the Ward house and a number of windows were broken in the hostelry. The old candy factory adjoining the Wilson chemical plant suffered pretty heavy damage, the one end of the building being torn away.

Electrocuted at Rockview.

Angelo Gelfi, sentenced from Westmoreland County for killing his wife, paid the extreme penalty Monday morning in the electric chair at Rockview. He entered the chair at 7:02 and was pronounced dead at 7:09 by Dr. C. J. Newcombe. Gelfi was attended by Father Angeles of St. Francis College Loretto.

COUNCIL MEETING

Tax Will be Placed on All Forms of Amusement in Bellefonte.

The contract submitted, by the special committee in regard to the electric lighting and maintaining of the fixtures in Bellefonte for the coming year, was accepted as read, with provisions that the borough may withdraw at the end of one year, at Monday night's meeting of Council. The contract provides that if at any time during the ten year period there is a general reduction in lighting rates, those for Bellefonte shall be affected proportionately.

At the final reading of the tax ordinance, it was accepted as read. This provides a tax on all forms of public amusement and entertainments in Bellefonte, excluding only those given for charity.

A petition, signed by 67 residents of East Howard street, asking that the street be repaired, chipped and tarred, was referred to the Street Committee for further consideration.

The Water Committee reported having received prices on oil burners and electric pumps for the water pumping station. The committee recommends the installation of electric pumps for emergency power until the arrival of the oil burners and generator. It is also reported that the big chimney at the water works will be removed in the near future, as the new system will make it useless. The fence at the rear of the big spring is to be removed, and one of wire will replace it.

The water power on Curtin Street was tested and showed a pressure of 46 pounds, which Council was informed exceeds the pressure required for that elevation. Statements were submitted showing $182.75 collected on the 1923 water duplicate.

The Fire and Police Committee's attention was called to the fact that lights on Logan Street, have been in very poor condition, some fixtures being broken and lights extinguished.

Other routine matters were taken up, various bills were reported paid and others ordered paid, and notes were renewed with payment of interest.

B. H. S. LOSES MEET

Winning Team Will Endeavor to Compete at Penn Relay.

The B. H. S. track team lost their first meet of the year to Lock Haven H. S. on the latter's field last Saturday afternoon. Although their opponents won by a score of 85 to 37, it does not indicate the closeness of the events. Bellefonte entered the meet with quite a few green men who lack only seasoning and experience. The coaches were very much pleased with the showing of the local boys, and feel very confident of their success in coming meets.

Emil, of B. H. S., proved his ability as a runner, when he set a new record for the quarter mile, covering the distance in 53 seconds. The relay team composed of Waite, Shope, McCullough and Emil made an especially good showing, winning their event with apparent ease. B. H. S. is making a great effort to secure transportation for their trip to Philadelphia, as they have been entered in the Penn Relay Carnival held annually by the University of Pennsylvania. The team up until this time has never been defeated in any meet, and feel confident that they will make a creditable showing if they are able to get to Philadelphia.

Charged With Assault.

Mrs. Hazel Dando, of Julian, was brought before 'Squire Woodring in Bellefonte for a hearing on Monday afternoon, charged with assault on George Weller, also of Julian. Aaron Weller, father of the prosecutor, testified that the latter was severely whipped by Mrs. Dando after the boy had been engaged in a quarrel with her son. The defense offered no testimony and the case was carried over to May term of Court. The defendant was held under $300 bail.

Hospital Graduating Exercises

The first annual graduation of the Centre County hospital will be held on Tuesday night May, 12, at the Court House. Rev. William C. Thompson, will deliver the address to the class of five, who are Misses Pearl G. Clevenstin, Alma M. Detwiler, Faye G. Watson Jane A. Keller and Alta M. Yarnell. The usual reception will be given after the exercises, featured by a local quartet.

Sunday School Convention.

The annual Sunday School convention of the 9th District will be held on the afternoon and evening of May 2nd in the Presbyterian church at State College. Everybody welcome. Please bring a box luncheon with you. 2t-23

PORT MATILDA ASSOC'N. OPPOSE BUS SERVICE

Community Organization Adopts Resolutions of Protest.

TRAIN SERVICE AMPLE

The Community Welfare Association of Port Matilda, whose membership is composed of many representatives and substantial citizens of that section of the Bald Eagle valley, has openly committed itself as opposed to the establishing of motor bus service through that valley when the new concrete state highway is completed. Resolutions adopted by the association on April 15th, set forth that Pennsylvania railroad passenger trains afford ample traffic accommodation and that a bus service is not needed.

Exclusive announcement was made last week in "The Republican" of the decision of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. to withdraw all passenger trains between Bellefonte and Lock Haven, except the two Lehigh trains, if the State Public Service Commission grants permits for a motor bus service in the valley. Public hearings are being held today by the commission on applications for such permits.

The resolutions adopted at Port Matilda follow:—

A RESOLUTION adopted at a regular meeting of the Community Welfare Association of Port Matilda, Pa., held April 15, 1925.

WHEREAS petitions are being circulated through our community for the purpose of securing a charter to run a bus line between Tyrone and Bellefonte through the Bald Eagle valley;

"RESOLVED that the Community Welfare Association of Port Matilda go on record as being opposed to the establishment of a bus line between Tyrone and Bellefonte through Bald Eagle valley for the following reasons:

"A bus line through this valley is not needed. The transportation facilities through the valley and between the points above mentioned are entirely adequate. Three East bound and three West bound passenger trains each day give us excellent train service.

"Our mail service is entirely satisfactory.

"Judging from what has occurred in other localities where bus lines have been established in competition with railroad passenger train service, we believe that the establishment of a bus line through Bald Eagle valley would be followed by drastic curtailment of the excellent passenger train and mail service which we now enjoy. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company sells monthly school tickets to our school children attending school at Bellefonte at a rate much lower than a bus company could coald consistently maintain.

"The majority of the families in the valley own their own cars and do not require bus service.

"We believe that the business life of any community is closely linked up with and is to a great extent dependent upon the business life of the railroad that serves it. We are of the opinion that a bus line operating through Bald Eagle valley would seriously curtail the operating revenue of the Bald Eagle branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad and our community would suffer in direct proportion. We cannot believe that a bus line can compensate our community for such loss.

"With regard to through traffic—Traffic originating at and bound for points beyond Tyrone Bellefonte—there seems to be no reason why such traffic would prefer to travel by bus when such trains as the Pittsburgh Easton trains are available.

"Moved by J. H. Crain and seconded by H. C. Woodring that the above resolution be adopted; that it be spread upon the minutes of this meeting; and, that a copy be sent to the Public Service Commission at Harrisburg. Motion carried."

Jewelry Store Sold.

Last week a deal was consummated whereby W. E. Crowsley, of Lancaster, became the proprietor of the Casebeer jewelry store. The new owner takes possession at once, and comes to his new work well equipped in training and education, having recently graduated from the government jewelers' school at Lancaster. He is a veteran of the World's War and was badly wounded in France. Mr. Casebeer who has been prominently identified with the jewelry business here for the last 25 years, has no definite plans for the future and for the present will remain in Bellefonte.

COUNTY HIGH SCHOOLS TRACK MEET ON MAY 2

Hold Annual Contest at Beaver Field, State College.

ENTRIES CLOSE TODAY

Five years ago a group of teachers, believing in the value of developing youth through group activity, organized the Centre County Track and Field Association. This organization has steadily progressed and the annual track meets are events which are looked forward to by every school.

This year's meet will be held at 1:30 P. M., May 2, on the new Beaver Field at State College. All contestants should have been registered by their schools on April 22. Points will be scored as in previous years, 5, 3, and 1, for first second, and third places respectively. Boys and girls points will be counted separately in the Class A. events, while, the two will be combined in the Class B. contests.

The classification of the various High schools in Centre county is as follows: Class A.: Bellefonte, Centre Hall, Millheim, Philipsburg, Spring Mills and State College. All other High schools in the county are Class B.

Three new team trophies will be provided this year. Small cups will be awarded to the winning relay teams. It was agreed at the fall meeting of the association last year to do away with giving prizes to indididuual contestants, in order to improve the financial situation of the Association. Small ribbons will be awarded to successful candidates however, in order that they may have something to show for their efforts.

The officials in charge of this year's meet will be Nate Cartwell, Penn State track coach, assisted by an able body of starters, timekeepers, etc., and Neil Fleming, graduate athletic manager of Penn State. The various committees are as follows: Messrs. Weik, State College; Erdley, Philipsburg; Hackenberg, Millheim; Yearick, Howard, and Dale, of Spring Mills. Oil Truck Crushes Bridge.

A large oil truck, used in oiling State highways, on Wednesday morning crushed through the iron bridge at Coburn station and dropped into the creek. The bridge was totally wrecked. It was one of several bridges on the last two toll roads in Centre County. Negotiations for taking over the roads by the County have never been completed. At one of the several hearings it was contended that the bridge just destroyed belonged to the County, but the turnpike company claimed ownership on the groand of having had possession twenty years or longer. The cost for repairing the bridge, or building a new one, would fall upon the turnpike company which would in turn have to look to the owner of the oiling truck for damages.

DANGEROUS PRACTICE

Many Motorists Disregard Traffic Rules in Bellefonte.

Many motorists are endangering the lives of pedestrians, and risking injury to themselves, by disregarding the traffic signals at street intersections in Bellefonte. The most flagrant violations occur daily at the intersection of High and South Water Streets. This is true particularlp of motorists driving onto High Street. The turn at that point is very sharp, being nearly at a right angle, and the traffic beacon is intended to warn drivers to slow down before coming onto High Street. Comparatively few pay any attention to the warning, and many cars make the turn while traveling at a speed of fifteen to twenty-five miles per hour. The practice is one that should be stopped at once.

The attention of State Highway Engineer Staples is called to the danger to motorists caused by placing piles of crushed stone at sharp turns and nearby street corners in town. Two piles of stone placed at the Rhoads corner on Linn Street have been removed. The road is very narrow at the sharp turn. It is difficult for two cars to pass when there is no obstruction at the turn in the road. For a time there was grave danger of cars striking the piles of stone along the side of the road and skidding into passing machines. At several other points in town there are piles of stone placed so near to street corners that drivers find it difficult, as well as dangerous, to pass other cars, particularly if one or more machines happen to be parked alongside street curbs.

The piles of stone are to be used in resurfacing the State highway through Bellefonte. If we are correctly informed, this resurfacing cannot be done until next month. If this be true, such piles of stone as may cause or contribute to accidents should be removed until the highway crew is ready to begin resurfacing.

A common practice that Bellefonte officials should strictly prohibit is the parking of cars close to street corners. This occurs most frequently during church service hours on Sunday, and motor traffic is usually heavier on that day than at any other time in the week. There should be a uniform distance from all street corners for parking cars, and the requirement should be rigidly enforced. Collissions may result in personal injury and serious damage to cars, as well.

RAID AT SANDY RIDGE

Two Persons Held for May Term of Court on Liquor Charges.

State Policemen Buckley, Leister and three others raided two places at Sandy Ridge last Saturday morning. As a result Charles Barcella, proprietor of a grocery store, is under $1500 bail for the May term of Court. Mrs. Julia Walco's home was one of the two places raided. She was unable to furnish $1500 bail and was committed to jail in Bellefonte to await trial next month.

At the Barcella grocery, the State police said they found 1½ gallons of moonshine liquor. At the Walco home, the officers said, they found a still containing about 20 gallons of mash.

Barcella and Mrs. Walco were given preliminary hearings before 'Squire Merryman, at Sandy Ridge, immediately following the raids, and after the hearing the evidence offered by State policemen he ordered both defendants placed under bail.

Ford Wrecked Near Zion.

A Ford coupe, driver unknown, was totally wrecked near Zion on Monday night. The Ford was travelling toward Bellefonte and was passing another car going in the opposite direction, when their wheels locked, throwing the coupe to the side of the road and upsetting it, demolishing the top, bending the fenders, and smashing the right front wheel. The driver of the other car, whose name could not be learned, is thought to have continued his trip, when he found that the occupant of the Ford was uninjured.

May Deduct "Gas" Tax.

Users of motor vehicle fuel upon which State taxes are levied may deduct these taxes in their Federal income tax returns, provided the vehicle is employed for business purposes. Solicitor Gregg, of the Internal Revenue Bureau at Washington, made the ruling on Tuesday. The opinion also held that gasoline dealers may deduct from their returns all of the amounts received from consumers as State taxes.

MANY HOUSEKEEPERS TOO ILL TO WORK

How Many Are Finding Relief from Weakness and Pain. Mrs. Brandenburg a Notable Case

MRS. EMIL O. BRANDENBURG
651 37TH STREET, MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN

Milwaukee, Wisconsin.—"I was in a badly run-down condition and I would get weak spells and terrible headaches. I felt so badly last year that I could not do any housecleaning. The minute I would lift or stoop it seemed as if I was going to fall to pieces. I told a neighbor how I felt and she said that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was surely the right thing for me. I took four bottles then and in the fall of the year I took three. I had been treated by a doctor, but he gave me an iron tonic and that did not help me. It seemed that the tonic did not have in it what the Vegetable Compound did. That gave me the strength and ambition I needed and I have gained in weight. This year before I started to clean house I got four bottles of the Vegetable Compound and am taking it right along. I tell all my friends about it and how much good it does me. They can notice it because I have gained in weight. I weigh 118 now and do all my work myself again."—Mrs. EMIL O. BRANDENBURG, 651 37th Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Mrs. Earl's Recovery

Horace, Nebraska.—"I had terrible pains and backache, so bad that I could hardly move, and I would have to lie down at times. I read advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I was so sick that I thought I would try it. My husband knew it was good as he knew a woman it had helped. It took all my pains away and I don't have any backache now. I do my own housework, take care of a few chickens and my garden, and have a little girl three years old to look out for. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends and I will answer all the questions I can, if any one writes to me."—Mrs. ADA EARL, Box 28, Horace, Nebraska.

Refuses to Aid Wife After 7 Years in Jail

Elizabeth, N. J.—Vitelo Baginolo, seventy-nine years old, went back to his wife, but he said he'd never support her.

He had spent the last 2,149 days in the Union county jail, charged by his wife, who is eighty-four years old, with failure to provide.

Baginolo objected strenuously to leaving the jail.

"I like it here," he protested. But county authorities insisted he leave; that they were tired of providing for him.

"I'll not support her," were his last words as he went through the jail door.

LET BEARDS GROW TO FOLLOW BIBLE

Twins Adopt Rules Laid Down in Old Testament.

Washington.—Converted a month ago to the belief that man would be better off spiritually if he adhered closely to the philosophy of life as portrayed in the Bible, Edwin and Edgar Gude, twenty-six, twin sons of the late Adolph Gude, local florist, have permitted their hair and beards to grow unhampered.

The Gude twins served as radio operators in the navy during the World war. Both have become imbued with the idea that nature should be allowed to take its course, not only in the matter of hirsute adornment but in their style of living.

They follow the rules for diet and mode of living laid down in the Old Testament, confining themselves to a vegetarian fare, and to simple clothing.

"We are trying to live the way our studies of the philosophy of life have convinced us that we should live," the twins explain. "We do not believe that because other people cut their hair or have a different view of religion they are doomed to eternal punishment. But we do believe that by following strictly the rules of life laid down in the Bible—by refraining from interfering with nature in our daily life—we will have bettered ourselves physically, mentally and spiritually.

"Our religion is not a new cult or creed. It is the old-fashioned Biblical kind. It is the religion of the philosophers of the Old Testament, who believed that men should 'separate themselves unto the Lord.'

"We are simply striving to be good Christians. We believe in Jesus Christ. We believe that God manifests Himself in nature, and that man therefore should not desecrate nature any more than he should blaspheme God."

Indians Reap Rich Harvest From Fishing

Washington.—Various tribes of Indians living in the Northwest reap an annual harvest from fishing sufficient to make many of them self-supporting, according to tabulations just completed at the Interior department.

The largest income from fishing by an individual Indian is reported at $4,242 per year by several Indians on the Quinaielt reservation in the State of Washington. Incomes of other Indians range from $1,000 annually up to $3,500.

Indians of the Neah bay jurisdiction, at the most northwesterly point in the State of Washington, obtain large receipts from seal as well as salmon fishing. Although handicapped by their ancient methods of seal fishing, these Indians have an annual sale of seal furs amounting to approximately $12,000 and upwards for the raw skins. Their receipts from salmon also exceed $10,000 annually.

Fishing in the Quinaielt river in the Quinaielt Indian reservation also brings receipts to the Indians of approximately $53,000 annually.

Judge Holds $2.85 for Haircut, Shave Larceny

New York.—John Kazos lives in Newark, N. J. But he knew no reason why he shouldn't drop into Antonio Martinez' barber shop in Manhattan, for a shave and a haircut.

"How much?"

"Two eighty-five."

"What?"

"Two eighty-five."

John Kazos wouldn't pay that for any haircut and shave.

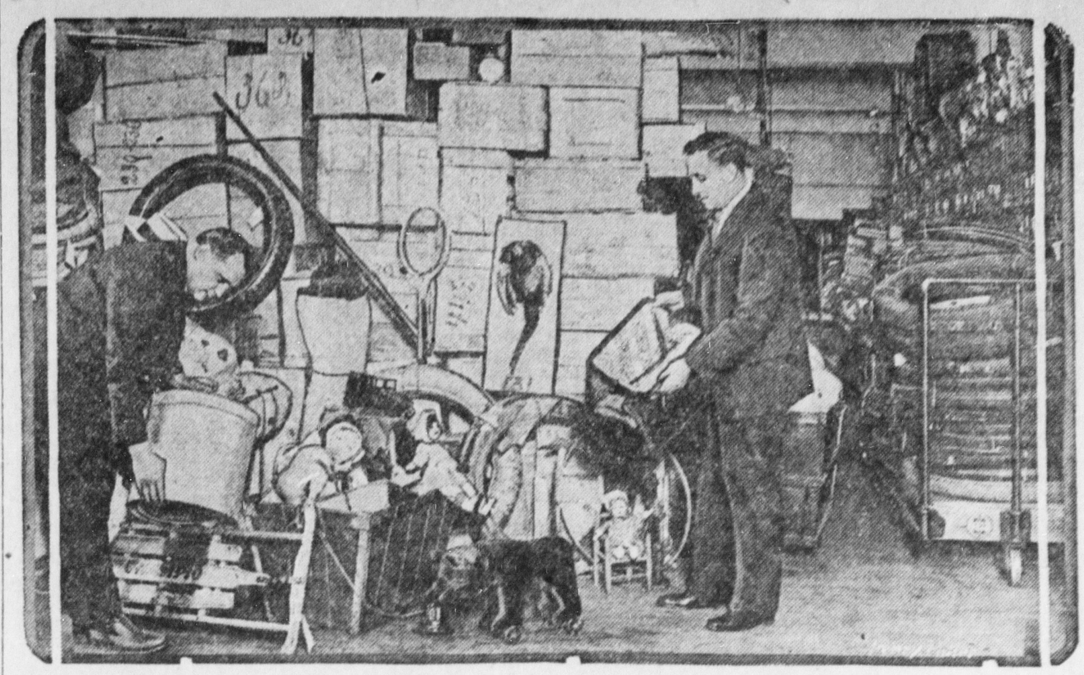
"Why, I can get the same thing for 75 cents in Newark," he said. And Mr. Kazos was out the door in search of Patrolman Sealey of the West Thirtieth street station.

To Magistrate Oberwager, Kazos was formally complaining of Martinez' alleged disorderly conduct when the court directed that the barber be held for petty larceny. Martinez protested he had applied numerous choice tonics and perfumes to his customer.

Finds Lightning Hole

Ephrata, Wash.—A fulgurite, or lightning hole, was recently found in a Douglas county dry coulee by E. R. Tromp. It is a glass-lined, shell-shaped hollow mass of sand and earth made by a severe bolt of lightning striking and entering into the soil. The redhot electric fluid apparently melted the sand and formed a tube nearly two feet in length. Right over this dry coulee or former river bed there were terrific electric storms the past summer, but little rain fell.

Uncle Sam Sells Unclaimed Parcels



Collection of unclaimed articles sent through the post office and recently sold by Uncle Sam at the dead letter office in Washington. Over 1,000 different lots of merchandise of all kinds are included in the packages which ultimately find their way to the dead letter office. The picture shows, left—F. H. Bushby, clerk in charge of property room, and Frank Staley, superintendent of the office.

Cross-Words Nearly Barred

Had Close Call From Being Listed With Roulette and "Lady Luck."

Washington.—Chance, luck, fortune, the spin of the roulette wheel, the roll of the dice, have fascinated mankind form time immemorial. Fortunes, even life itself, have been staked on the turn of a card or the result of a horse race. The thrill of a hoped-for scoop in the stock market has lured untold thousands to ruin and disgrace.

Once the great public games of chance, the Louisiana lotteries, reaped a rich harvest from almost every home in the land where the price of a ticket was available, or could be begged or borrowed. For every happy prize winner whose pockets were lined with gold by the gods of luck, tens of thousands of losers suffered bitter disappointment. Losing only to play again, throwing good money after bad, vainly hoping for a chance, a smile from fortune, a windfall that never came, many lottery patrons became confirmed gamblers. Misery, degradation, suicide, were the milestones of their unhappy existences.

Mails Bar All Hazard.

The congress of the United States decided many years ago that the postal service should not be used for the promotion of these lotteries. By legislative enactment it forbade the carriage in the mails of any and all matter pertaining to schemes, either wholly or partially, dependent upon lot or chance.

No law of the United States has been more faithfully executed, none more rigidly enforced. Every day the Post-Office department denies the use of the mails to dozens of enterprises having the lottery taint. These usually originate in or are related to ingenious sales schemes. The merchant and sales manager are quite cognizant of the fact that the public loves to take a chance, play a game or solve a puzzle. Accordingly they announce competitions or contests of a popular kind, and secure immediate attention for their advertising.

The postal lottery laws do not affect genuine competitions in which the skill of the contestant is the determining factor in the distribution of prizes. Advertisements or other notices of a trapshooting match furnish a typical example of this sort of contest. The marksmanship of the competitors decides the result.

Guessing Contests Popular.

Guessing contests and what are known as gift enterprises are the most popular advertising devices. In the window of a store appears a large pile of beans, cigarettes or other objects not easily counted en masse. The public, through the press, is invited to guess—at times the word "estimate" is used—the number of such objects on display. The person submitting the correct or most nearly correct figures is, of course, the prize winner. The Post-Office department regards such enterprises as mere lotteries. Guesswork is chance pure and simple.

Another scheme of the same kind is one in which all and sundry are invited to submit an estimate of the distance in miles, yards, feet and inches a particular automobile will travel on one gallon of gasoline. It has been energetically argued that this is a matter of skill exclusively. Bore and stroke and number of cylinders are announced, together with other figures pertaining to the engineering specifications of the car.

Nevertheless a great many additional indeterminate factors enter into the performance of the automobile. Atmospheric and road conditions, ignition efficiency, the skill of the driver, the functional efficiency of every engine part, the grade of gasoline, and a host of other things materially affect the mileage. In all probability no automotive engineer could mathematically determine in terms of miles, yards, feet and inches just how far a car will go on a specified quantity of gas. Almost any one familiar with automobiles may hazard an opinion on the matter, but this is mere guesswork and, consequently, the so-called contest of skill is in fact a lottery. No matter concerning it may pass through the mails.

Gift Enterprises Barred.

Gift enterprises innumerable are constantly being conducted, but not with the aid of the postal service. In most cases each purchaser of an article at a certain store receives a numbered ticket entitling him to a chance in a prize drawing. That this is a lottery needs no demonstration.

In other instances no purchase is necessary. The tickets are given freely to every person visiting a certain store on a certain date or during a specified period. This is a simple but apparently effective form of advertising. However, it seems that under the postal laws this seeming generosity on the part of the merchant does not permit of his mailing circulars or other advertising matter relating to his scheme.

In another form of prize scheme a store displays in its window an eight-day clock which will be given away free as soon as it runs down. The fortunate person who is to receive this valuable timepiece, as the announcements run, will be the one who correctly predicts the exact day, hour, minute and second at which the clock will stop. This proposition resembles the automobile mileage guessing contest and falls in the same category. The element of chance in these schemes is patently the determining factor. Literature relating to them is also barred from the mails.

Glad News About the Cross-Word.

Quite recently the reading public was amused and also a little chagrined by an announcement that cross-word puzzles had been declared nonmailable. It was stated that they were regarded as lotteries, and as such could not be admitted to the mails. Such is not the case. The announcement was incorrect and due to a misunderstanding on the part of the person making it. In the particular case before the Post-Office department at that time, the contest which involved the solving of a cross-word puzzle had additional elements dependent upon chance and consequently came under the ban of the postal lottery laws.

Cross-word puzzle contests are not objectionable if they will stand the acid test of certain simple requirements. The puzzle must be capable of only one correct solution. The definitions by which the contestant is guided must be accurate and not misleading. Furthermore there must be a provision that in the event that more than one person submits a correct solution, a prize of equal value to that originally offered will be awarded to each contestant so qualifying.

Word-building contests are those in which the problem consists in making the greater number of words from a given set of letters. The Post-Office department does not exclude matter relating to these tests of skill and knowledge, provided certain well-defined requirements are complied with. The contest rules must specify whether words spelled alike but with different meanings will be counted as separate words; also whether obsolete words, proper nouns, names of persons and places may be included in the competitor's list.

There must be furnished the name of a dictionary which will be the recognized authority in all cases of dispute. The particular edition to be relied upon, as well as its publication date must be specified. Tie provisions similar to those prescribed for cross-word puzzle contests are likewise essential.

In a recent competition of this kind the winner compiled a list of approximately 50,000 words made from the letters contained in a comparatively short phrase.

Milks Goat at Breakfast, So His Wife Asks Divorce

Spokane, Wash.—Fondness for goats led Clayton C. Higgins of Spokane to milk one at the breakfast table directly into his cup of coffee, Eugenia Higgins testified in the trial of her divorce suit in Superior court here. Mrs. Higgins also testified that her husband insisted upon keeping one of their two goats in the house. The case was continued.

FLYERS DEPICT TRADE IN FANTASTIC TERMS

United States Army Air Service Has Developed a Vocabulary All Its Own.

Washington.—The army air service, upon which the congressional spotlight has recently played with brilliancy, has developed a vocabulary all its own.

An air service officer who can't fly is popularly known as a "keewee," from the arctic bird with undeveloped wings. When one becomes confused in conversation he is referred to as being in a "flat spin." "Ground flying" denotes conversation concerning flying. When a speaker at a banquet orates at undue length an air service hint to him to "land" is to place two matches to form a T, representative of a plane's outlines.

"Ceiling" Is Highest Point

"Ceiling" is the highest point an aircraft can reach, depending on its horsepower and the air density. "Washed out" is the army aviator's designation for getting killed, and "cracked up" means a wrecked plane in which the pilot might not be dead. "Archie" is an endearing term that army flyers have for all anti-aircraft artillery.

Any particular design of aircraft is known as a "job," the propeller being termed the "prop." "Give 'er the gun" is the air equivalent of stepping on the gas to speed up. To "set down" is to land, but when the flyer tries to run parallel to the ground beyond the conventional landing height and falls a few feet in his intentional descent to mother earth, he is said "to pancake."

Nicknames of Training Planes.

A "hisso" is a training plane equipped with a Hispano-Suiza motor. A "Jenny" is a training plane of the JN type. To "take off" is to get into the air, and a "hop" is a short flight. A "barrel roll" is a complete revolution lengthwise. "To zoom" means to climb very sharply for a short period. A "sausage" is a small dirigible or balloon.

To come to the more scientific terms, an "airplane" is sustained by dynamic action, whereas an "aerostat" is an airship or balloon filled with gas lighter than air. The army air service has not developed the "ornithopter," which, bird-like, flaps its wings to aid the machine's flight, considering this type not suited to service needs. It is interested in the development of the "helicopter," capable of rising vertically by a thrust of its propeller. A "glider," which is an airplane without a motor, such as the Wright brothers first learned to fly in, is now being used by the army as a target.

World Covered by Radio Net

Powerful Wireless Telegraph Stations Connect Earth's Greatest Cities.

Washington.—Port Jefferson, Carnarvon, Nauen, Great Lakes, Nantes, and Iwaki are unfamiliar names to most people. To radio operators they stand for six of the world's greatest cities; New York, London, Berlin, Chicago, Paris, and Tokio. They are radio gates to these cities, says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its headquarters at Washington.

"Because of interference by tall buildings the wireless telegraph stations for the great cities generally are away from the business centers. Sometimes the city's radio gate may be 150 miles away, like the Cabo de Sao Thome station used by Rio de Janerio. Japan offers another reason for locating a radio gate far from a great city. When Yokohama and Tokyo fell in the cataclysm of September, 1923, all communications ceased. Civilization received the first S. O. S. for help for the stricken district from a little seacoast town, Haranomachi, 100 miles north of Tokyo, outside the quake area. This trans-Pacific wireless station generally goes by the name of Iwaki, because of the province in which it lies.

Rome Station at San Paolo

"Saint Paul is believed to have been executed at a place now called San Paolo, near the old road to Ostia two miles south of Rome. At this sacred place tall radio towers today receive news from all Christendom. Ostia, once proud port of entry for Rome, gives way to San Paolo, radio port of entry for modern Rome.

"Abu Za'bel is Cairo's radio gate. Resting on the edge of the desert, its towers look upon nearby Heliopolis, where Plato studied. In no less striking contrast stands the Carnarvon station, on which London depends largely for trans-Atlantic radio communication. Carnarvon townspeople point out, not their radio station, but grim Carnarvon castle, said to be the most nearly perfect example of a medieval fortress in the British isles. Carnarvon owes its radio importance to its location in westernmost Wales.

"Nantes is best known for the edict temporarily granting religious freedom to the Huguenots, in France, but radio operators are more familiar with it as a radio station for Paris. Nantes has not displaced Eiffel tower nor the American-built Bordeaux station. Nauen, 20 miles east of Berlin, is the radio port of entry for the German capital. New York may get its wireless messages from any of a number of places. Although communications are constantly coming in at Port Jefferson, L. I., Tuckerton, N. J., near Atlantic City, and Belfast, Maine, are automatically relayed so that they are all actually received in a New York skyscraper.

"Wireless telegraphy throws a net around the earth. The South Orkneys, off the tip of Tierra del Fuego, claim the permanent station nearest the South pole. In January, 1924, the National Geographic society radioed greetings to the Farthest North station, the Bowdoin, Donald B. MacMillan's ship fast in the ice, and deep in the gloom of Arctic night, at Refuge Harbor near Etah, Greenland.

Most Northerly Station.

"Credit for the most northerly permanent station must go to Norway for Kavoresand, which is north of Hammerfast, at the tip top of the Scandinavian peninsula. The lonely Valgach island post maintained by the Soviet government is nearly as far north.

"It is not regarded as wise to cross the Sahara desert in midsummer. The Sahara is more unconquerable than the sea, but radio now has done for the sea of sand what it did for the ocean. Last summer an American newspaper man went overland from Algiers to the Niger. Hazardous though the journey was this traveler was able to communicate with his wife in the United States nearly every three days through the oasis radiotelegraph stations established by the French.

"Col. Claude H. Birdseye and his party two years ago were swallowed up for weeks in the depths of the Colorado river canyons. While their fate was debated in the newspapers the party at the bottom of the canyon heard through their radio set the sad news of President Harding's death in San Francisco.

"Could the great explorers come back they would find the scenes of their exploits decorated with wireless towers. Darien, where Balboa discovered the Pacific ocean, has a wireless station. Cebu, the island on which Magellan was killed, now supports one. So does San Salvador where Christopher Columbus landed. Magellan, going through the Straits, today might radio a waiting world at one end, 'Am entering Straits,' and from a station at the other end report 'Very windy passage. Will use Panama canal next time.'"

Women Workers Annoyed

Tokyo.—The young women ticket sellers at the Tokyo station have made representations to the railway authorities to abolish the hanging of their name plates beside the booking office on the ground that they are deluged with love letters from strangers.

Mine Is Found After 29 Years

Gilbert, Latest Nevada Goldfield, Reward of Persistence of Prospectors.

Gilbert, Nev.—Days of the old Western frontier are recalled vividly by this new mining camp, a gold-boom town that has sprung up at a place where only rocks and sand were visible a few weeks ago.

Scenes here are reminiscent to oldtimers of such camps as Goldfield, Manhattan and Rawhide twenty-odd years ago.

Gilbert now has a Main street, lined with wooden structures of all sizes and sorts. There is even a weekly paper, the Gilbert Record. The hillsides are dotted with 100 or more tents. Almost hourly big trucks arrive from Tonopah and Mina, the nearest railroad points, loaded with lumber, coal, machinery and supplies. New houses are going up, and almost every line of business incident to a mining camp is represented. There are stores, restaurants, an assay office, law offices, a garage and service station, a dance hall.

First Inkling Came 29 Years Ago.

The real story of Gilbert starts in 1896, when Charles Lampson, a desert prospector, picked up a piece of rich gold quartz near an Indian camp in the Monte Cristo range. Lampson passed many months searching the hills for the outcropping from which the gold had come. Finally he gave up and wandered away to other fields.

J. B. Gilbert took up the search. He met with no more success than Lampson. His sons, however, persisted in the hunt. The elder Gilbert died many years ago. Nearly twenty-three years later his three sons, Fred, Herman and Logan, located the Last Hope. They had called it that because they had planned to make it their last effort to wring gold from those hills.

The Gilbert boys began to get values from the surface. They took out a shipment, and the excitement started. A few days later Dick Raycraft, a veteran prospector, working for the Gilberts, discovered the "jewelry shop" in a badger hole on top of a hill now known as the Black Mammoth. Some of the rock assayed $1 or more a pound. This started a stampede.

Guard Patrols Discovery Claims.

The exposed rock on the surface of the Gilbert holdings is so rich that an armed guard patrols the place night and day. Thousands have visited the strike. It is estimated that not less than $5,000 has been given away in specimens.

Hundreds of prospectors are in the surrounding hills. Many new strikes have been reported. Every day the interest grows more intense. Old-time gold seekers are coming back from Mexico, from Canada and elsewhere.

While the Gilberts' Last Hope first drew attention to the new field, it is the Black Mammoth and the Homestake that bid fair to make the camp world famous. The Homestake is just beyond Black Mammoth, and recently it gave up a ledge 1,000 feet long which pans gold the entire distance. There are eight different locations where gold specimens may be taken from the surface at random.

Find Remains of Mastodon in N. Y.

Doctors Mook and Mathews of the American Museum of Natural History, well-known scientists, examining the remains of one of New York city's earliest visitors, a mastodon, which wandered on Manhattan Beach island 10,000 years ago, and died at what has since become Dyckman street. Workmen, digging for an apartment house, unearthed the bones.

SEVEN MOTHERS DIE TO EVERY 1,000 BABES BORN

Lack of Pre-Natal Clinics in Cities Surveyed Blamed in Report to Conference.

New York.—For every thousand babies born in eighty-six cities in the United States seven mothers give up their lives, Dr. George T. Palmer, director of research of the American Child Health association, reported at the national conference on child health held at Columbia university under the auspices of the Institute of Arts and Sciences.

Some of the places in which investigations were made, Doctor Palmer said, lose 10 per cent of the babies born, largely because the cities are not provided with pre-natal clinics.

"Diphtheria attacked nearly seven thousand persons, mostly children, in these cities a year ago," said Doctor Palmer. "Only 40 cities, however, have made any material beginning in educating the public as to immunization against this disease.

"In only 67 cities is the water supply above suspicion, and only 21 of these have 90 per cent or more of the milk pasteurized. The promising health note of this survey is that each city has a health officer, but only half of them devote full time to their work. Every city has a public health service.

"In 54 of the cities health information is being taught in the schools, in the language that the child understands. Out of 900 schools visited the common drinking cup was found in only 13. The majority of children are sleeping with their windows open."

Other speakers at the conference were Dr. Samuel McCune Lindsay, professor of social legislation at Columbia university, who presided; Emma Dolfinger, director of the association's health education division; Dr. Philip Van Ingen, secretary of the association, and Dr. Haven Emerson, professor of public health administration.

"If we are to have genuine health education," Miss Dolfinger said, "we must have teachers trained for health teaching and health schools.

"The public schools can and should produce girls and boys whose behavior is personally and socially healthful. Only so will the most perfect public health facilities we can devise be properly appreciated, properly financed and properly used to achieve their purpose of improving the public weal."

Weave Beds for Dogs

Seattle, Wash.—Mother used to permit the old dog to lie on a rag carpet remnant beside the heater in the sitting room, but nowadays an industry thrives on manufacturing mats for dogs.

An unusual shipment from the Orient aboard the Iyo Maru, which arrived here recently, was a carload of dog mats which will add to the comfort of American dogs. They are made from a tough fiber with the rough-cut ends woven in to prevent scratching of the user.

NOVEL CROWNS ADORN CLOCHES; UNUSUAL IN NOVELTY SWEATERS

IF IN doubt as to whether the cloche is still in fashion, take a stroll down Broadway or Main street and tabulate for one's self. However, there is a difference between the now and the then of every popular cloche. Analyzing the situation, the small cloche is keeping favor with the public by offering such a fascinating medley of novel crowns, one's interest is not allowed to lag.

For a long time fashion has thus been spending its ingenuity on crowns, brims being considered a negligible quantity, but lo! with the coming of spring brims have burst into sudden glory, that is as far as depth and size are concerned. The latest pokes are mostly brims, and they are getting more so as the season advances. In many instances of these new bonnet shapes, the brim is turned up at the back. Indeed, the turned-up back brim is a definite style tendency. Many of the large hats in the advance guard of summer millinery emphasize this feature. The idea is demonstrated in that charming poke bonnet shown last in the accompanying illustration. This model uses taffeta silk for its brim and fine silk haircloth for the gown. Note how the crown is fitted to the head.

Of the three modish cloches completing this group, it may be said that the crown in each instance shows great depth, this being a characteristic feature of the majority of little shapes. One traces the cloche trend in each brim, although presented in various moods of roll-off-face—for hat number two, slight droop for number one brim, with a restricted turban-bonnet effect defined in the tailored silk model.

Not only do brims roll high at the back in last-minute chapeaux, but the trimming itself rises in tall bows and erect effects directly over the coiffure. This is especially true of the larger-brimmed shapes which are "on the way" for summer conquests. Particularly are soft hair bodies folded up at the back, held into position by soft silken loops or under masses of stemmed roses.

The many "sometimes different" ideas created by knitted outerwear stylists each season somewhat contradict the "nothing-new-under-the-sun" theory. Perhaps the artistically scarfed sweater in this picture is the "exception to the rule," for at a glance it proclaims the unusual. The thrill of newness which it affords is no doubt due to the unique placement of a fine white scarf or sash which is matched, as you will observe, to the cuffs and pocket flap. Not only in name, for this model is known throughout fashiondom as the "student prince" sweater, but in appearance this fetching knitted and sashed blouse is sure of appeal to women of artistic temperament. Indications are that before the season is far advanced the "student prince" sweater will be a pronounced favorite.

There are innumerable other lovely and out-of-the-ordinary things among fashionable knitwear this season. For instance, there are new lacy one-piece frocks knitted of fine rayon which are adorable. They come in "delicious" colorings and their distinctive note is the long knitted sleeve.

The knitted scarf and shawls are marvels of beauty, being lavishly befringed and decidedly colorful. These partake of shawl-like square shapes. Of course, they are going to prove irresistible to the summer girl, for they are ideal over lightsome frocks.

Adding to the glory of things knitted are winsome hat, scarf and blouse sets, whose striking colors enliven the scene of picturesque fashion. Magenta with white bespeaks the last word in color combinations in these sets.

Among sweater novelties a favorite is knitted of white mohair. The collar, cuffs and bindings are of gaily plaided flannel.

Knitted coats in fancy constructions are wonderfully popular, and becoming more so, as time progresses. These abound in novelty touches, such as all-over jacquard patternings, pipings of gold leather, while fancy knitted stitch contributes greatly to their interest. The chenille knitted coat is the latest. Last minute modes stress the knitted suspender skirt.

FARM CALENDAR

Timely Reminders from The Pennsylvania State College.

START SHORTCAKE FRUIT—Spring is the only time in which to set out strawberry plants, fruit specialists of the Pennsylvania State College say. Choose a time preferably just before a rain if possible. Set the plants 18 inches apart in the row and have the rows three feet apart.

APPLY PRE-PINK SPRAY—In applying pre-pink spray there is no need of putting in arsenate of lead except in those cases where it was omitted in the delayed dormant spray or where the delayed dormant was applied early. Arsenate of lead should be put in the pink spray but there is no need of using nicotine in this application.

PROTECT THE FOREST—Care of the woodland means protection from fire and grazing stock as well as the application of good common sense in cuttings.

NOT TOO LATE FOR SHRUBS—In Pennsylvania shrub planting may be safely done during all of April and most of May. If nursery orders have not been placed for ornamental shrubs, do it now so they can be set out before it is too late.

GROW LEGUMES FOR HAY—Proteins are important in dairy feeding. These are best provided in legume hay. Clover and alfalfa can be seeded with oats this spring; thus providing for the hay crop next year. Soybeans sown this spring will provide a supply of excellent hay next fall.

TEST THE SEED CORN—How do you know your seed corn will grow and give a good stand? Testing it will tell the story of the possibility of getting a stand with the seed on hand.

OVER THE COUNTY

Caretaker William F. McKinney shipped more than a hundred Norway Spruce, ranging from four to five feet in height, from the Seven Mountain nursery, to Benton, Columbia county, to be planted in a park there.

Miss Marian Neese, of Spring Mills, a senior at Penn State, was last Tuesday night taken into the honorary home economics fraternity This is a great honor to be bestowed upon a local girl and will help her greatly in her future work.

Anglers who expect to do some trout fishing this season, are cautioned to wear their buttons on some visible part of their attire, also to see that their card certificate is signed in their own hand writing, in order to avoid arrest and payment of a fine.

A garage, an automobile, several out houses, and a lot of chickens, belonging to Lawrence Runkle of Centre Hall were totally destroyed by fire last week, which is believed to have started through the ignition of some gasoline which was being taken from the automobile.

George Holt's lumber camp nearby Unionville was threatened with destruction by fire last week, but due to the quick action of Mr. Holt and some other workmen who happened to be near at hand, the blaze was quickly extinguished, and very little damage was done.

Members of the K. G. E. degree team of Bellefonte, on Friday night conferred the second degree on six candidates seeking admission to the Centre Hall lodge. Twenty seven members from Bellefonte were present, and after conferring the degree, refreshments were served.

Conrad Bowersox, aged 68, of Logantown, was badly burned about the hands and legs, when his clothing took fire while he was engaged in a single handed battle with a forest fire. The fire started from brush which was being burned on the farm, and worked its way to a nearby woods.

The Rev. M. Whitford, of Unionville, had a narrow escape from serious injury last Monday, when he was engaged in papering a room at the residence of Elmer Roller. The chair on which he was standing slipped and he fell heavily on the floor, landing on his side. It was thought that he had fractured his hip but upon a doctor's examination it was found to be only badly bruised.

Stocks One of Oldest Forms of Punishment

The stocks at Wroxhall recalls one of the oldest forms of punishment of drunkards, disorderly persons, and other offenders against the law. The chief merit of the punishment was that it was cheap, no expense being incurred by the parish. Every village was required by the law of 1405 to provide stocks, and these as a rule were placed just outside the church, as being the most prominent situation. Up and down the Midlands the old stocks are still to be met with. In London their use was discontinued nearly a century ago, but in the provinces they were not abandoned until some years later, says the London Chronicle. So far as Birmingham is concerned, the last person placed in the stocks was in 1844, the punishment taking place in the yard of the old public offices in Moor street.

It is recorded that at Stratford-on-Avon as late as 1868 a man who had taken too much malt liquor was put in the stocks, but does not seem to have been at all abashed by his public degradation, for when an inquisitive person inquired how he liked being where he was he replied: "I beant the first mon as ever were in the stocks, so I don't care a fardin about it." Biblical students need not be reminded that Jeremiah, the prophet, was placed in the stocks by Pashur, and Paul and Silas would seem to have suffered much the same kind of treatment at the hands of the jailer at Philippi.

Much Work Involved in Making Dictionary

The dictionary, together with the textbook, is largely responsible for the uniformity of pronunciation in the United States and the general adoption of a similar system of spelling than that which is used in England. Such words as "labor" and "color," spelled with a "u" in the second syllable in England, are examples of the newer method.

The business of making a dictionary is a stupendous task. A dictionary is a record and arrangement of all the words of a language, current and obsolete, together with all their meanings and uses. In addition, a dictionary is a historical record of words.

The lexicographer—for that is the name given to a man who compiles a dictionary—must indicate the origin of each word so far as it can be determined, and the changes which have come about in its meaning through the passing of the years. If a word has died out, he must tell when it happened.

Relic of Feudal Days

The old Norman tower of Holy Trinity church, at Richmond, in Yorkshire, England, dates back to the Eleventh century. It is one of the few, if not the only church where the old custom of ringing the curfew still survives. The tower contains two bells. For centuries the larger bell has been rung every day at six o'clock in the morning and again at curfew hour—eight o'clock in the evening. The smaller bell is rung at eleven o'clock on Shrove Tuesday morning "to bid the housewives tend the fires and cook the pancakes well." Another quaint survival at this church is the practice of ringing the "gathering bell" on the occasion of a funeral to give the mourners an hour's notice to prepare. Unless speedy restoration work is undertaken this ancient tower is said to be doomed.—Family Herald.

His Own Death Notice

Mike was working diligently in his potato patch when he saw the postman coming up the road, bringing a black-edged envelope.

Mike became uneasy, and showed it.

"Hope it's not bad news," said the postman.

"It is that," said Mike, looking at the address. "It's upset I am entoirely. My brother, Pat's dead. I can tell by his handwriting."—From Everybody's Magazine.

Church Authority Runs Along National Lines

Authority in the eastern orthodox churches is divided along national lines. There is a Russian church, a Rumanian church, a Greek church and so on, with primates, metropolitans or patriarchs of their own nationality at the head of each.

Four offices to which a great and ancient prestige attaches are the patriarchates of Constantinople, Alexandria, Antioch and Jerusalem, and that of the ecumenical patriarch of Constantinople has the most weight of all; his influence extends throughout the eastern churches; though his authority does not.

But the Russian church, for instance, is a sister church to that of Constantinople and not at all a subsidiary. Nor is this a result of recent events in Russia, the autonomy of the Russian orthodox faith dating to 1721.

Under the czars this was the established church. Soviet Russia has disestablished it and appropriated certain of its properties, and the government policy includes a propaganda against all religion. But any faith whatever may be freely professed in Russia, so far as Soviet law is concerned.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Moravian Church Has School in Far North

At Makkovik, in the ice-bound peninsula of the North American continent known as Labrador, a country where one may travel hundreds of miles without seeing a human habitation, and where the temperature in winter is often 60 degrees below zero, there is a boarding school kept by two Englishwomen.

It is under the control of the Moravian church; and is one of the most remarkable as well as the least accessible schools in the world. A mission steamer goes out once a year with goods for the Eskimos, and on her last trip along the coast, prior to her return, she takes both Eskimo children and the few white children available to the Makkovik boarding school.

There they must remain until the long winter is over, for in such terrible cold, and with no conveyance but dog-sledges, it is impossible for children to travel. That they are happy goes without saying, and with a gramophone, a piano, and a fine selection of lantern slides, as well as an excellent library, the children get not only a good education but also a good time.

Service Has Many Duties

The United States coast guard service was created by an act of congress of January 28, 1915, by combining therein the revenue-cutter service and the life-saving service. Its duties are to render assistance to vessels in distress, saving life and property; destruction or removal of wrecks and other floating dangers to navigation; extension of medical aid to American vessels engaged in deep-sea fisheries; protection of the customs revenue; operation as a part of the navy in time of war or when the President shall so direct; enforcement of laws and regulations governing anchorage of vessels in navigable waters, and quarantine and neutrality; suppressing mutinies on merchant vessels; enforcement of navigation and other laws governing merchant vessels, etc.; protection of game and seal and other fisheries in Alaska and work as an international ice patrol off Newfoundland.

Insects and Scientists

Scientists are making a special study of animal and insect life as a means of determining changes which have taken place in the earth. The relations insects of one region bear to those of another indicate that certain islands were once connected. In Jamaica, recently, they explored a very ancient section of that country that has been above the sea for a longer time than its neighboring land and which shelters insect tribes of great age. This discovery leads authorities to believe that animal life of that isle is more closely associated with those of Haiti or Cuba, and that it originally found its way from the mainland over a land bridge long since engulfed by the ocean.—Family Herald.

Gas From Flower Gardens

The great development of natural gas in the industries around Pittsburgh, Pa., is in a considerable measure due to George Westinghouse of airbrake fame. He finally induced his wife to let him sink a shaft in her flower garden, his labor being rewarded by a geyser when he had gone about 1,000 feet. From this came the development of the Pittsburgh supply. Westinghouse himself worked out the system of piping that enabled it to be distributed without leakage, at the same time reducing the pressure by the use of gradually larger pipes, until it could be safely handled by the time it reached a customer.

Earliest Known Letters

It was formerly believed that the earliest extant collection of formal letters was the series of about 150 Greek epistles professing to have been written by the tyrant Phalaris of the Sixth century B. C. A controversy arose, however, and Richard Bentley, in his famous "Dissertation on the Letters of Phalaris," in 1699 demonstrated, as is now universally admitted, that they are of comparatively late origin, about the Second century A. D. Among the early genuine letters of the Greek period are those of Isocrates (died 338 B. C.), nine in number.

DOGS RELY LITTLE ON THE EYESIGHT

Seem to Be Guided Only by Sense of Smell.

Many hunters believe that a good old-fashioned "hound dog" is capable of following a trail ten or twelve hours old. But the definite recorded information is scant indeed. It would be interesting to know just how long after a trail was made a dog is able to follow it with accuracy. Also, we should all like to know to which groups or classes of smells dogs are most sensitive.

You may have observed that a dog never pays any attention to a portrait of another dog, or of his master. Even his own reflection in a mirror may leave him unmoved. Most of his power of sight seems to go to waste. Dogs have for generations dwelt in a world of smell. With us, seeing is believing. But with dogs, smelling is believing. I suppose nearly every dog owner has noticed that if his dog gets separated from him on the street and becomes slightly excited or bewildered he might as well be blind. He ceases to depend on his eyes and can look right at his master without seeing him. He must identify his master by scent. Many dogs are quick at catching a ball and are accurate in grabbing at small prey such as rats or mice that try to dodge them; but there is a mass of experimental and other evidence to show that a dog's eyesight is not keen at perceiving small objects not previously brought to his attention. Indeed, there is evidence that the average dog makes much less use of his eyes than is popularly supposed.

Does a dog sitting on the kitchen steps ever happen to look across the back yard and see a bone that has been thrown out for him? No, he probably doesn't find the bone until he happens to go near enough to smell it. But if another dog runs across the yard, he sees that, because it is too conspicuous even for his untrained eyes to miss.

Dr. John B. Watson, formerly chief psychologist at Johns Hopkins university, brought up a litter of puppies with several kept in a dark room until three or four months old. These practically sightless dogs got along just as well as the others. They were able to find their way about, open doors, and sense directions the same as any average puppy. One even learned to jump a rope! The point is that they didn't miss the lack of eyesight, because they wouldn't have used their eyes much anyhow.—Fred C. Kelly in Collier's Weekly.

Mr. Munyon's Present

Ben Marsh of the Farmers' National council, ardent advocate of government ownership of the railroads, said recently:

"Our politicians love us dearly before the election, but after the election we—well, we get a shock like Mr. Munyon's.

"Mr. Munyon's wife came to him a little time before Christmas and said:

"'George, dear, I'm sorry, but you'll have to give me a $200 check to buy our presents with. I've cut the list down to the bone, but prices are so high, and the list is still so long—'

"'It's a tall order, $200,' said Mr. Munyon, gloomily. 'Look here, suppose you don't give me any presents at all this Christmas?'

"'Oh, George, I could never agree to that.'

"'Yes, yes, you must. Times are mighty hard.'

"'Well, if you insist, George, I consent, just for this once.'

"'Good!' And Mr. Munyon sighed with relief. 'Now go through your list again and tell me how big a check you need.'

"Mrs. Munyon went through the list a second time very carefully, while Mr. Munyon waited with a hopeful smile.

"'There!' she said at last. 'There, George! You need only to give me a check for $199.50 now.'"

Two Howlers

Special notice has just reached me of two excellent schoolboy howlers. The first is the most idiomatic translation of "Pax in bello," which was rendered "Freedom from indigestion." The second relates to the well-known historical incident of Queen Elizabeth and Sir Walter Raleigh's cloak. After describing the scene, the pupil made the queen say:

"Sir Walter, I am afraid I have dirtied your cloak."

"Dieu et mon droit," replied Sir Walter, which means in English, 'My G—d, you are right!'"

"The Republican's" Cross-Word Puzzle

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Bank on Shipboard

Among conveniences for the comfort of passengers on board the ocean liner Leviathan, one of the latest is a branch bank. This bank has been established by an eastern trust company. About 4,000 persons use the bank each trip. The cashing of checks, the changing of money from one country into the currency of another, issuing of letters of credit, the paying of money on wireless orders, these are some of the chief activities of this seagoing bank. In addition to this the bank issues bulletins of stock quotations day by day, as they are received by radio.—Boston Post.

There were not a few longing eyes cast upon the truck load of booze that was wrecked along the State highway east of town on Wednesday morning of last week. There were quite a few half-barrels of the forbidden stuff. The driver disappeared in short order. Constable Holmes trailed the car to State College and the good, old lager was delivered safely to Bellefonte. The accident to the truck was caused by a blow-out. Papers in the car showed it to be owned by a Scranton party, who can find the truck safely stored in a State College garage and the booze reposing in the county bastile.

Sunday afternoon's storm was the most terrific that we have known in this section in the last quarter of a century. Lightning flashed, thunder pealed and rain and hail came down in torrents. Small buildings were wrecked and many fruit trees uprooted. A small building on the Fred Fry farm was overturned and many apple trees ripped out. The Col. Boal barn on the Branch was partly unroofed. The roof of the D. W. Thomas house was partly torn off. The Kustaborder garage was lifted off its foundation. The Ed. Watkins home was turned over several times. The William Thompson barn was completely wrecked, only the gable end remaining standing. In a large orchard nearby every tree was uprooted. Fortunately no lives were lost when the stone garage of Keller Bros. was unroofed. Lightning struck the Klinger home, ripping the roof and doing other damage. A large apple tree fell on a house nearby the Klieger place at Rock Springs. Lightning struck the Robert Reed home, destroying the water system and causing other damage. Port Matilda

Last Wednesday Mr. James Hughes, of the Bellefonte Academy, came to see our School Board of Worth Township and make an exchange proposition. He proposed entering a Mr. Smith from his school in the grammar school for one month and in exchange take Samuel Harshberger to Bellefonte to have him pitch for the Academy baseball team. Mr. Hughes pointed out how such a plan would pave the way for Harshberger to put himself through college. Since it was Mr. James, we made the exchange, and we like Mr. Smith very much.

YOUNG FARMERS MEETING

Plan Interesting Program at State College June 16 to 19.

The sixth annual Young Farmer's Week will be conducted at the Penna. State College, Tuesday to Friday, June 16th to 19th, inclusive, according to a notice received by County Agent, R. C. Blaney.

All farm boys and girls of the State are eligible to attend. Those in charge of the arrangements aim to present information on the best agricultural practices which will be helpful to the boys and girls in attendance; to inspire rural young people through an educational trip to the state agricultural school; to provide an opportunity for county live-stock judging teams to participate in state-wide judging contests; and to furnish wholesome and carefully directed recreation and athletics.

Judging contests, college inspection trips, recreation periods, stunts, educational moving pictures and attractive features will make up the big four-day program provided for the youthful farmers of the state.

All who plan to attend the Young Farmer's Week should get in touch with County Agent Blaney, so they will know what equipment is necessary and what rules must be observed.

Firemen Had Busy Day.

Thursday of last week was a gala day for fires. The local firemen answered three calls during the day, including the fire at Van Jodon's on Curtin street in the morning. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon the second alarm was answered at the Decker Bros. garage on High street. The fire proved to be a slight blaze which started in the vapor baths above the garage and was extinguished without having caused any damage. Scarcely had the doughty fire fighters returned their apparatus to its respective fire houses, when the third alarm sounded. The roof of the Willard Dale home was ablaze this time, having been ignited from an over heated chimney. Due to quick action of painters who were on a nearby house and who upon discovering the fire formed a bucket brigade, the blaze was nearly extinguished when the apparatus arrived.

Illegal Fishing Cost $200.

Game Protector Ross, of Clinton County, on the opening day of the trout fishing season, came across a fisherman nearby Loganton, who had twenty trout that measured less than six inches, the legal size limit. It cost the fisherman $200 fine. Ross came across another fisherman who first refused to open his basket and then started to run away. Ross managed to seize the man's basket, also his hat on which was pinned his license button. The license number established the fisherman's identity and he will be arrested.

"THE TIME OF DELIVERANCE---

MILLIONS NOW LIVING WILL NEVER DIE"

Instinctively mankind seems to feel that in some way deliverance will result in release from the throes of evil, injustice, inequality and death. Has not the persistent failure of plans and schemes for life and happiness blasted hope of deliverance among men?

The Bible's Plan now stands forth with great promise. We have reached the time in prophecy when the old order of things must give place to the new. The world dominion is being transferred, not the destruction of the earth. God's kingdom, for which Christians have so long prayed, is at the door. Come, hear these marvelous tidings from the Bible by

Finder of Leper Cure in Danger

Has Narrow Escape From Chinese Bandits.

Washington.—Within a few days after the United States public health service announced the release of lepers as "cured" by a treatment which included the use of chaulmoogra oil, word came from Joseph F. Rock, who located the chaulmoogra tree in Burma, telling of his narrow escape from Chinese bandits.

Mr. Rock was leader of the National Geographic society expedition to Yunnan province, China, which found blight-resisting chestnut trees for transplantation in the United States. After a few months in this country he returned to Yunnan to seek plant specimens for the Arnold arboretum, at Cambridge, Mass.

Mr. Rock spent one night in a dilapidated village temple, full of coffins. His native guard deserted him; outside the town the heads of native victims, captured some days before, were hanging from poles.

"From Tungchwan to Chaotung is five days' journey, and two days out of Tungchwan I had the most terrible experience of my life," Mr. Rock writes.

"With much misgivings I left Tungchwan. The first day passed without incident, but the second had much in store for us. After lunch, under an old walnut tree we made our way over the mountains with my 12 Nashi men, 26 mules, 40 soldiers, and all the followers who took advantage of my going and joined on for the sake of protection which the soldiers gave.

Robbers Pursue Caravan.

"We had not gone very far when my head muleteer came and said that robbers were behind the caravan. I waited for the mules to catch up with us, and as they came in sight I rode on, but not for long, as my boys yelled 'Robbers are coming,' and at that moment they opened fire on us. My native soldiers behaved rather bravely, but we soon found that the brigands outnumbered us considerably and that the battle was to be a one-sided affair.

"We pushed on under fire as best we could through a pine-covered slope while the soldiers engaged the brigands; the latter pursued us, and we retreated, all of us, soldiers included, under the fire of the brigands down a deep ravine which we had to cross and up the other side over a most terrible rocky trail. The firing continued the rest of the afternoon. Thanks to the bad aiming of the brigands we lost only one soldier. We reached the small plain of Yichesun, on the edge of it being a small hamlet called Panpiengai. As we reached the plain, I thought, 'Thank God, now we were safe,' but, alas, the brigands followed us, they looted the small hamlet, captured three soldiers with their guns, and while they were busy there we reached the village of Yichesun, where we had to stop for the night.

Brigands Chase Guards.

"Just as I arrived and passed through the dilapidated old gate (but no wall) there also arrived 35 soldier guards sent to us from Chaotung. As I was talking with their officer, one of the Tungchwan soldiers came running into the village to tell me that 200 robbers were only one and a half miles from the village and that they could not hold them back. I sent the Chaotung soldiers to help the Tungchwan soldiers, but soon they all returned with the robbers at their heels.

"I was quartered in a miserable old temple full of coffins in the center of the village. The brigands came to within half a mile of the hamlet where there was a large temple, and of this they took possession. Darkness came on. I never spent such a terrible night in all my life. At midnight the officers of the soldiers came and announced that the brigands were outside and that they could not hold the place and that they could not protect me. I had opened my trunks and distributed $600 in silver among my men, wrapped up some extra warm underwear, a towel, condensed milk and some chocolate, besides ammunition for my two .45-Colts. I sat fully clad waiting for the turn of events. Every minute I expected the firing to commence. The soldiers said that they could protect me but not my boxes, and that the best thing would be to retreat and hide if the brigands rushed into the place. The people of the village began burying their few valuables and great excitement ruled the hamlet. It was a terrible wait and a long night.

"Outside of the hamlet were hanging from poles heads of brigands that had been captured some days before. I was informed that 600 bandits were outside the village and that capture was irresistible. I cannot tell you how I felt. However, at 4 a. m. they were still outside and no shot had been fired. At dawn there was no one to be seen. They had vanished."

WILL SEEK WEATHER DATA HIGH IN AIR

To Make Daily Flights to Study Conditions.

Washington.—Knowledge of hitherto unknown air conditions at high altitudes which will enable the weather bureau to make forecasts with more certainty and for a more advanced period will be made available to that office under arrangements completed with the naval air station at Anacostia.

According to the program, naval planes will make special daily flights carrying an aerological observer equipped with instruments to record the air temperature and humidity far above the earth. A naval aerologist schooled in weather observations and forecasts, will be assigned to the work. He will carry with him in the plane thermometers and barometers which will record conditions with mathematical accuracy.

Upon descent the officer will immediately transmit the data he has gathered to the weather bureau for use in daily forecasts and to army and navy aviation stations in and near Washington for their guidance in flying.

Temperature and humidity at great distances above the earth's surface have always given an element of uncertainty to weather forecasts and have made "long-range predictions" almost impossible. These elements in the upper air have a direct influence on weather conditions of the surface. With accurate information as to the conditions available the weather bureau is expected to establish a new record for veracity and farsightedness.

Famous Coast Whaler Becomes a Movie Ship

Los Angeles.—Conversion into a motion-picture ship will be the fate of the picturesque old barkentine, Narwhal, which for more than forty years was conspicuous in Pacific coast shipping, and whose romantic history over that period reads like the pages of old-time fiction.

The Narwhal, built at San Francisco in 1883, is one of the finest examples afloat of sailing-ship construction, in the view of the shipping men. Immediately after her launching she was entered in the whaling industry, in which she remained for many years. During that time she established many records, both in whale catches and fast cruises. After leaving the pursuit of whales, the craft was used for a number of years in the trade to the South seas.

The final voyage of the Narwhal ended last year when she crept into San Francisco harbor from an expedition to the South seas. On her outbound trip from San Francisco, the barkentine disappeared for a period of sixteen months and was recorded as lost at sea. She later appeared at a South sea port, however, bearing stories of terrific wind storms.

Shortly after casting anchor at San Francisco the Narwhal was sold at auction to satisfy claims, and the motion-picture interest that acquired the old-time whaler will move her down the coast to San Pedro.

Gets Electric Ray Fish That Could Stun Elephant

Danville, Va.—Dr. Russell J. Coles, tobacconist, whose hobby is deep-sea fishing, and who taught the late Theodore Roosevelt harpooning of devil fish, has presented to the Museum of Natural History in New York a giant specimen of the electric ray fish. He caught it off Morehead City, N. C. It weighed 120 pounds, and, according to Doctor Coles, had a sufficient charge to "stun an elephant." It was stranded near his boat, he says, by a receding tide. Members of his crew prevented it from regaining the sea. When dead the electric energy stored in what Doctor Coles describes as batteries near the head of the fish, was found to be negligible. It was placed in preserving fluid and shipped to the curator of the museum.

Face Paralyzed—She Cannot Laugh

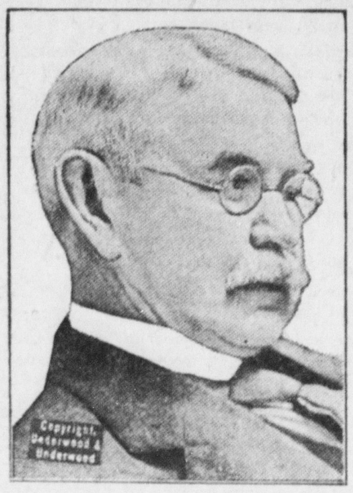
Dog Plays Mother to Pair of Baby Tigers

Macon, Ga.—Two baby tigers, born in the winter quarters of a circus here, are being mothered by a huge bulldog. An animal trainer, knowing the custom of a tigress to slay its first born, took the animals from the mother and sought a dog. For, the trainer said, the dog is fond of this untamed relative of the cat. The dog, with two of its own puppies and the two tigers, is being quartered in a hotel room.

PROMINENT PEOPLE

Must Accept His Increase in Salary



Here is an up-to-date portrait of Henry St. George Tucker, Democrat, of Lexington, who represents the Tenth Virginia district in the national house. He declined to accept the $2,500 increase in salary which congress at the last session voted to give itself. Doubtless he felt a bit lonesome, for so far as known only seven other members of the house—and no senators—turned down the increase. And his refusal was all in vain, for Comptroller General McCarl ruled that the increase must be accepted.

The salary bill increased the salaries of members of congress from $7,700 to $10,000. The cabinet members were raised from $12,000 to $15,000; also the vice president and the speaker of the house. The bill was passed without a roll call in either chamber. The President hesitated a bit over signing it, but did sign—"with restrained enthusiasm." Of course many members voted against the bill and nearly all the representatives managed to get into the Congressional Record with an explanation of their vote. Johnson of Kentucky casually remarked that at the salary of $7,500 the only ones who could afford to go to congress were those who could draw upon their private resources and those who were incapable of earning anything at home.

Woodlock Given Recess Appointment

President Coolidge has given a recess appointment to Thomas F. Woodlock of New York to be a member of the interstate commerce commission, following refusal of the senate to confirm the nomination.

Woodlock will be obliged to serve without pay until December. At that time, if his appointment is approved by the senate, he may be granted back pay. If he is rejected again he will have no claim for remuneration.

Mr. Woodlock is a Democrat. The opposition to Mr. Woodlock, as publicly expressed by the Democrats, is due to the fact that they felt the South should be represented in the particular vacancy of the commission being filled. The President offered it to two men in the South who declined for private business reasons. Having tried the South and having also read the statute which does not specifically bind Mr. Coolidge to pick a man from the South, the President went ahead with the appointment of Mr. Woodlock.

There are other things besides southern representation involved in the controversy. Mr. Woodlock has been a financial writer in New York, and has spent a good deal of time in Wall Street. The Democrats think he will naturally reflect the views of the financial and railroad world rather than the shippers and farmers.

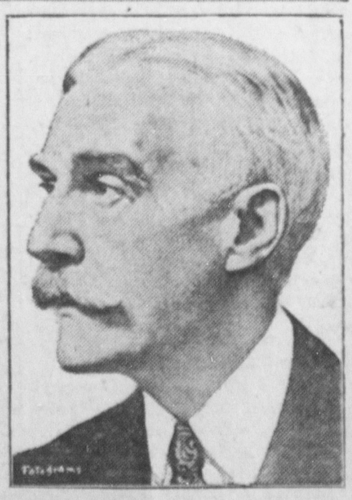
Leiter Grandchild Becomes Baroness

International marriages bring about odd things. Mary Irene, eldest daughter of the late Lord Curzon, and granddaughter of Levi Z. Leiter, Chicago merchant, inherits the baronies of Scarsdale and Ravendale and becomes a baroness through the death of her father. She is a daughter of Mary Leiter, whom Lord Curzon married in Washington in 1895 when he was parliamentary secretary to the British embassy. He later became viceroy of India and his wife the vicereine. She died in 1906. By the marriage settlement drawn in Chicago, Lord Curzon and his bride were provided with an income of $200,000 a year.

Once Lord Curzon and his wife's relatives had a dispute over $10,700. In June, 1923, his brother-in-law, Joseph Leiter, was made defendant in a suit seeking to remove him as one of the trustees of Levi Leiter's estate. The suit was started by Leiter's sister, Lady Marguerite, widow of the earl of Suffolk, but it later was settled. Joseph Leiter once failed to corner the wheat market in a crash involving millions, occasional echoes of which are still heard.

In the meantime Joseph Leiter and several employees are under indictment in Massachusetts under charges of Volstead act violations.

Secretary Mellon's Treasury Changes



Patriotism must be responsible for the filling of the post of secretary of the treasury by a man like Andrew W. Mellon (portrait herewith), who is one of the very rich men of the world and gets more criticism and abuse than salary. With the coming of Lincoln C. Andrews to succeed Assistant Secretary Eliot Wadsworth, a general realignment of duties is being made among the secretary's assistants.

Undersecretary Winston will become secretary of the World war foreign debt commission, and will have jurisdiction in handling all foreign debt matters, two functions carried on by Mr. Wadsworth. These will be in addition to the regular duties assigned to the undersecretary's office.

Assistant Secretary Dewey will supervise all railroad loan questions, heretofore under control of Mr. Wadsworth, in addition to his duties as assistant secretary in charge of fiscal affairs. Assistant Secretary Moss will be relieved of jurisdiction over the internal revenue bureau, which will be given to Mr. Andrews. Mr. Moss, however, will retain supervision over the bureau's prohibition unit, thus keeping enforcement efforts centered in one office, which will continue in charge of the division of customs and the coast guard, both of which are active in the prohibition program.

Mr. Andrews, in addition to the internal revenue bureau, which usually is regarded as a one-man job, probably will be given charge of the supervising architect's office also, together with continued control over the public health service.

An English professor asserts that man's intelligence reaches its zenith at sixteen years, a finding anticipated about 720 generations ago by all persons aged sixteen.

A holdup man knocked his victim down because the victim did not have enough money, thus warning the general public to carry a little more change or risk the consequences.

The most curious statisticians we know anything about are those who try to prove that traffic conditions in this country are getting better because they are becoming worse slowly.

There are homes with built-in refrigerators, built-in ironing boards, built-in radios, built-in bookcases, built-in kitchen cabinets, and so on. But you must build in contentment yourself.

The young man who will fast for two years for experimental purposes will have leisure. Think of the time he will have in not having to wait for steaks that have been sent back for reconditioning.

Fortune Claimed by Pea Sheller

London Market Woman Seeks O'Connor Wealth.

Hastings, Neb.—Mrs. Mary O'Connor Tindall, 36 Doon street, London, England, who has been shelling peas in Covent Garden, London, for 50 years and claims to be the champion pea sheller of the world, has put in a claim for the fortune of John O'Connor, Hastings' shoemaker recluse, who died 12 years ago leaving $150,000 and no known heirs. The property is now worth about $250,000 and is held by the state until the true heirs are located.

Meantime, some 500 or more O'Connors all over the world have been after the fortune, but none have been able to prove relationship to the recluse.

The fortune consists of cash, gilt-edged bonds and mortgages and several of the finest farms in Adams county.

Mrs. Tindall has just written Judge Waldo Withersteen of the District court that she believes she is a sister of John O'Connor and, as such, she thinks she is entitled to the $250,000.

Referred to Three Brothers.

Mrs. Tindall says that 55 years ago her little brother, John O'Connor, at that time twelve years old, started for America in company with Dan, Denny and Mike Ryan, brothers and friends of the O'Connor family.

"If you can find either Dan, Denny or Mike Ryan, they will tell you I am John O'Connor's sister," Mrs. Tindall naively remarks in her letter.

Mrs. Tindall was "written up" a couple of years ago as the champion pea sheller of the world. Her story gradually drifted around until a woman in Spanishburg, W. Va., read it. The West Virginia woman had also read of the O'Connor fortune. She wrote Mrs. Tindall about the American fortune awaiting proof of relationship. Mrs. Tindall remembered her brother of half a century ago, and immediately addressed Judge Wintersteen.

For over fifty years Mrs. Tindall has done nothing but shell peas, she says. Shelling peas is her one and only job. But she has never seen a pea growing on a vine. She hasn't been out of London for over fifty years and seldom has left the block where she works.

In Hastings there's always something new in the O'Connor case. "O'Connor" is a standing assignment on the books of the city editors. Reporters, every day, stop by to see, not if there's anything new in O'Connor affairs, but what the new thing is. There's always something new. For 12 years it's been the standing news of Hastings.

Last month the new O'Connor story was the trial of James B. O'Connor, Kansas City lawyer, charged with forging a will giving himself the fortune of the recluse, whom he claimed as an uncle. This was O'Connor's third trial.

One trial in 1922 lasted for four months. This was the case in which four claimants of the fortune—one from North Carolina, another from Lapeer, Mich.; a third from Fresno, Cal., and the fourth from Selkirk, Man.—were fighting one another for the estate. The Selkirk claimant was a half-breed Cree Indian who said old O'Connor was his father, and that he formerly had been a trapper for the Hudson's Bay company. None of the four proved his claim.

Kept Affairs to Self.

O'Connor came to Hastings when a young man, opened a shoemaker's shop, attended to business, saved every cent, and made no confidants. He never wrote a letter nor received one, and never spoke to a woman except on business. He invested every cent he got in lands at $1.25 to $2.50 an acre. That land is now worth $200 an acre. He died without leaving a will.

The court took over the property. The story got into the newspapers, and it fairly rained claimants. At one time over 500 men, women and children had formally applied to the court for the fortune.

O'Connor's body was kept in cold storage for five years awaiting identification, and every O'Connor who saw it positively identified it as the body of his father, grandfather, uncle, brother, cousin, or some other relative, although none of them had seen him for 50 years.

After burial it was exhumed for the benefit of a woman from Watervliet, N. Y., who immediately recognized it as the body of her runaway husband who had deserted her 51 years previously.

But none has been able to prove relationship and the fortune is still here. Mrs. Tindall, champion pea sheller of the world, has just as good a chance of getting the money as anybody else, especially if she can find Dan, Denny or Mike Ryan anywhere.

Death Ends Dog's Long Vigil at Master's Tomb

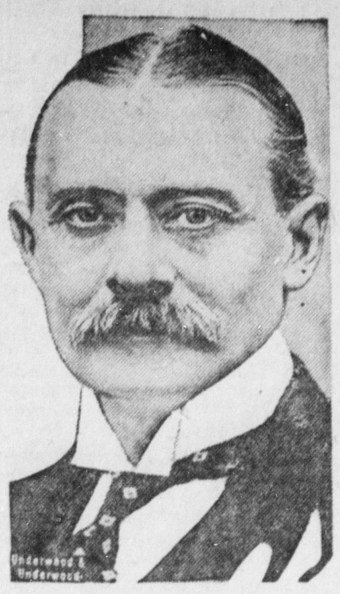
Lancaster, Ohio.—Death has ended the long vigil of Nero, a dog who died on his master's grave in a lonely cemetery here.

His owner, Charles Farmer, was shot to death last July in a gun fight with prohibition officers. Nero followed the funeral procession to the cemetery, where he kept watch daily, leaving the grave at short intervals for food. All efforts to coax the dog away failed.

A boulder now marks the grave of Nero.

Ministers in their sermons referred, just as they have in the past six months, to the love and devotion of Nero for his master.

EXPERT EMBROIDERER



When Princess Mary of England announced that there would be a gold thimble prize offered for the best example of masculine needlework as part of the soldiers' handicraft exhibition to be opened May 6 at Norfolk, many of the peers of England made application to exhibit. Since the war he has amused himself with a type of embroidery of his own invention.

45,000 Feet Aloft Is Flying Limit

Speed at Turns Must Not Exceed 250 Miles.

Washington.—Flight surgeons of the army air service believe man has about reached the maximum flying speed at which he can suddenly change direction, owing to the centrifugal force exerted on the body and its effect on the blood. This speed is placed in the vicinity of 250 miles an hour.

The limit of speed on a straightaway course, they say, can probably be placed much higher than is now mechanically possible, but experience will have to write the actual figure.

The height limit, they add, is around 45,000 feet.

This contention regarding the maximum speed for turning, the flight surgeons point out, is predicated upon the experience of Lieut. Alvin J. Williams of the navy, at the Pulitzer air races at St. Louis in October, 1923, who said he became practically unconscious at the turns of the triangular course, when he rounded at 243.67 miles an hour.

Blood Carried to Stomach and Legs.

The flyer at the turn banks his craft at right angles, the centrifugal force acting at right angles to the new direction of travel and the blood being carried away from the head toward the stomach, and probably even into the legs, causes faintness and possibly unconsciousness.

Blood circulation quickly adjusts itself, the flight surgeons say, and the direction of centrifugal force is rapidly changed, although at turns at very high speeds in airplanes, brain injury or rupture of a vital blood vessel might result.

Even when supplied with oxygen, the flight surgeons hold, an aviator could not survive beyond a height of 45,000 feet, under ordinary circumstances, because the available oxygen pressure in the lungs would be too low to sustain life.

Between 23,000 and 25,000 feet is the "upper limit of consciousness" without oxygen, say the flight surgeons, and at higher altitudes oxygen is indispensable.

Only if inclosed in a cabinet or suit in which the barometric pressure were kept at a degree compatible with life would it be possible to ascend beyond the 45,000 limit, with suitable arrangement made for disposing of the surplus carbon dioxide.

Queer Experiences at High Altitude.

The aviator experiences, among other things, as the result of high altitude flights, sleepiness, uncontrolled emotion, including giggling, singing or laughter; muscular weakness, shortness of breath, impairment of the intellect and judgment, and impairment of vision and hearing.

These are chiefly due, medical men explain, to a lack of oxygen in the brain.

There are 50 army flight surgeons stationed at different flying fields, all on flying status. A flight medical school is maintained at Mitchel field, New York, where courses are given select medical officers picked for aviation duty. Aviation psychology forms a large share of their work, and they are acquainted with first-hand conditions of the men who go up in the air in ships.

The National Aeronautic association's records show that the present maximum altitude record is held by a French flyer with 39,586 feet, and the speed record in a straightaway course is held by another French airman at 278.48 miles an hour.

Red Tape Costs U. S. $970 in Man's Death

Washington.—Because the check for a cash settlement on his $1,000 insurance policy was not mailed by the veterans' bureau until 16 days after he died Comptroller General McCarl has ruled that the government must pay to the beneficiary of John Chard the full face value of the policy.

On his discharge from the army in May, 1921, Chard asked for a cash settlement of his 20-year endowment policy, and signed a release. He died on June 27 and the settlement check for $30 was mailed July 13.

PROPER MANNER FOR MAKING CUP OF TEA

Freshly Boiled Water Is of Much Importance.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Water for tea making should be freshly boiled, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Water that has been boiling for some time is distinctly flat and insipid. Have two earthenware teapots, both warmed previously by pouring hot water in and allowing it to stand until the pot is to be used. The amount of tea required depends on the individual taste and on the kind and quality of the tea. Measure the required quantity of tea in the hot pot (from which the warming water has been emptied), pour on as many cups of freshly boiling water as are needed, steep from three to five minutes, and strain into the other hot pot. Three minutes will usually allow most of the aroma and taste to develop without an excess of tannin, which makes the tea astringent.

Serving Afternoon Tea on a Homemade Tea Wagon.

When using English breakfast or China congou tea, one level teaspoon to each cup of water is satisfactory. A five-minute brewing gives more body, but the three-minute brewing makes a more delicate cup of tea. China congou has less tannin than the green teas and less than the India and Ceylon black teas.

Tea should never be boiled. After straining off the leaves, the pot should be kept hot in a tea cosey. Tea served with cream should be stronger than tea served with lemon.

Cheese Salad

1½ cupfuls cream cheese.
2 tablespoonfuls corn oil.
¾ teaspoonful salt.
¼ teaspoonful paprika.
½ cupful pecans.
½ cupful green pepper.
½ cupful pimento.
½ cupful mayonnaise.
½ cupful evaporated milk chilled and whipped.

Blend oil with grated and whipped cream cheese, salt and paprika. Add chopped nuts, green pepper and pimento. Blend with mayonnaise and fold in whipped evaporated milk. Place in mold and pack in equal parts of ice and salt for 3 hours. Serve on lettuce leaves garnished with parsley or water cress.

Earning Money at Home by Making Your Own Soap

In farm butchering there is usually a large quantity of fat scraps which would be a loss if not utilized for making soap. Also, there are the fat scraps and trimmings from bacons, hams and all home-cured meats, which can be saved and made into soap. The fat scraps saved from fall until spring will amount to considerable, and with these you will be able to make enough soap, for all family needs, to last at least six months. This would be quite a saving.

An excellent recipe for making a hard white soap, as good as any commercial soap you ever bought, is given below:

20 pounds of clean melted fat (free from salt);
4 quarts of soft water in which are dissolved:
4 13-ounce cans of lye and
4 heaping tablespoonfuls of powdered borax.

Let the lye and borax solution stand until cold. It is best to dissolve the lye the day before you want to make the soap, as it takes the solution quite some time to cool. The grease should be just warm enough to be in liquid state. Add the lye solution slowly and stir mixture moderately until it reaches the consistency of honey. Now pour in cloth-lined box to harden. When partly hardened cut in bars but do not remove from box. Cover with an old rug or blanket and let stand 24 hours, when it may be removed. If possible, let soap stand in a warm dry place for a month before using. Remember, the longer the soap ages the better. It is milder and lasts longer. This recipe will make you about 100 bars of hard white soap, worth more than $5, and you will get a great deal of satisfaction out of seeing the results of your own handiwork.

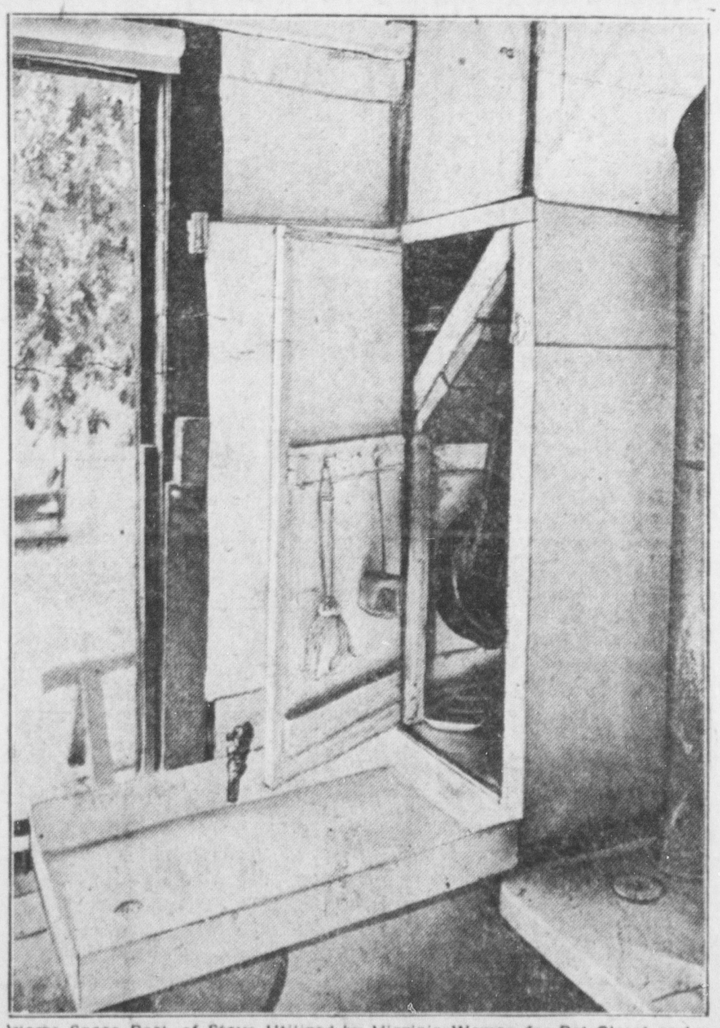
Baking Rhubarb Before Canning Is Ideal Plan

Try baking rhubarb before canning it—you will like the flavor. Wash the rhubarb stalks and cut them into half-inch lengths. Add one-fourth as much sugar as rhubarb, by measure, and bake until tender in a covered dish. Then pack in hot jars, and process for five minutes in a hot-water bath—that is, in any covered vessel of sufficient depth for the jars or cans, when set on a rack or false bottom, to be completely immersed while processing. The time is not counted until the water surrounding the jars has begun to boil actively.

What might be called the "hot pack" is now considered the best method of canning for all vegetables and a number of fruits, although certain fruits may be packed cold if boiling sirup is poured over them in the containers and the processing is continued for 20 minutes or more according to the product.

Directions for canning the common kinds of fruits and vegetables are given in Miscellaneous Circular 24, which may be obtained by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C.

VIRGINIA WOMAN UTILIZES WASTE SPACE



Waste Space Back of Stove Utilized by Virginia Woman for Pot Closet and a Warming Closet Above Where She Raises Her Bread.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The corner between the stove and the wall is almost never utilized. In most kitchens it is too small and awkward to get at, so nothing is kept there. In Mrs. E. L. Johnson's home in Powhatan county, Va., this waste space was made even more hopeless because an old, unused staircase ran up to the second floor just there. The stovepipe was run through this staircase, the wood lined with metal to make it fireproof, and the space under the tread was made into a closet for pots and pans, mop, soap shaker and other accessories to dishwashing. A homemade sink was installed, taking advantage of the good light from the window. She has a barrel waterworks. There was another space available above the pot cupboard and as the heat from the stove pipe is just right for a warming closet, Mrs. Johnson raises her bread there.

Mrs. Johnson also made herself a wheel tray from an old washstand and a high stool. She took all the old paint off her kitchen cabinet, enameled it white and painted a number of coffee cans for cereals and supplies, thus making her kitchen very compact and convenient. The picture was taken by the United States Department of Agriculture.

BIG MOTOR RACING YEAR

Four Mammoth Speedways to be Built for 1925 Season.

Automobile racing, the most dangerous of all sports, during the 1925 season will have the biggest boom since the "horseless carriage" was invented by the late Elwood Haynes. Four mammoth speedways, in addition to the six major tracks already in existence, are to be built. The total gates of the speed classics will be exceeded only by big league baseball.

Officials preparing the famous Altoona board bowl for the championship classic on June 13, when the cream of the world's driving aces will compete for a $25,000 purse, have received word that Dallas, Detroit, Miami and Minneapolis are preparing to spend millions in construction of speedways. San Francisco is also mentioned.

CHANGES IN HUNTING LAW

No One Knows How to Tell When Bear is One Year Old.

Many hunters have expressed dissatisfaction with various changes made in the hunting laws by the recent State Legislature. Some changes that were desired were not made, and most of those made it seems are not particularly pleasing to hunters.

The Nicholson bill, known as House Bill 265, is a typical sample of the sort of hodge-podge that resulted from the violation of the gentlemen's agreement between the large associations of sportsmen and the Board of Game Commissioners, which was proclaimed last summer and which, if carried out, would have absolutely prevented any changes in the game laws at this session.

The Nicholson bill went into the House as a bill eliminating the quail as a game bird, and it came out as almost anything but that.

It is in direct conflict with the Federal regulations governing the shooting of migratory birds both in the matter of the open seasons and in the matter of the bag limits for the day and for the season, and places the Pennsylvania hunter at a distinct disadvantage as compared to his brother sportsmen of neighboring States without in any appreciable degree protecting the migratory waterfowl and other birds.

As regards these birds the bill cuts the month of September out of the season, at its start, the open season provided being from October 1 to January 15 The open season for shore birds, excepting for woodcock and Jack or Wilson snipe is September 1 to November 30, and the season for snipe and woodcock from October 1 to November 30.

This change practically deprives Pennsylvania hunters of any snipe-shooting at all, for there are few if any snipe in the State excepting perhaps in the southeastern counties along the Susquehanna and Delaware rivers, after October 1.

The Lake Erie, Conneaut Lake and Pymatuming swamp sections, famous sniping grounds during September, seldom see a snipe in October, as these birds are the first of the migratory tribe to leave. October is all right as a snipe season in Virginia or Kentucky, but in ordinary years it does not mean a thing in Pennsylvania.

The bag limits for ducks and geese as fixed in the bill are at variance with the Federal bag limits.

The Pennsylvania hunters may not kill more than five geese or brant in a day or thirty in a season, and their kill of wild ducks of all combined kinds in the future will be fifteen a day and sixty a season.

Under a Federal regulation the daily limit is twenty-five. There is said to be a reduction contemplated in the Federal limits, but it is as yet far from an accomplished fact, and has not yet even been advertised.

From the migratory birds the Nicholson bill jumps to the raccoon and fixes the open season from October 1 to January 15.

Only the watchfulness of Senator George Weingartner prevented the first fifteen days of October from being taken from the season. The bill does cut an entire month from the end of the season.

From the raccoon the bill jumps to the bear and inaugurates a radical departure by the protection of all bear under one year old. As a matter of fact this means eighteen months old, because of the fact that bears cub in the spring.

How the hunter is to tell the age of the bear as it goes scuttling through the brush is not elucidated in the bill.

In addition to this restriction of the age of bears to be killed, the Nicholson bill cuts ten days from the start of the open season by establishing it from October 10 to December 15. The reason for this change has not been explained with any degree of reasonableness as yet.

From the bear question, the Nicholson measure drifts over into the deer precincts and takes up a much-mooted and contested change in the law by wiping out the provision permitting the killing of bucks with spikes six inches long. Hereafter young buck must have at least two points on one of his antlers.

From the deer to the rabbit, leaps the bill, the season bag limit on rabbits being reduced from forty to thirty.

As a fitting wind-up to such a measure some wag has put in a provision in no wise related to anything else in the bill which takes away from game protectors the power to enforce or aid in enforcing any law excepting those relating to game, fish or forestry.

B. H. S. Wins Game.

B. H. S. was victorous in the first baseball game of the season, played on Tuesday afternoon against Millheim on the latter's field. The game was closely contested throughout, having many thrills during the nine innings of play. Bellefonte finally took the lead in the ninth inning and won by a score of 7 to 6. Both teams played exceptionally well for this time of the year, and as Bellefonte has an unusually hard schedule before them, things look very promising for a successful season.

Fire on Thomas Street.

The local firemen answered a call on Monday afternoon at the home of Christ Young, on Thomas street. The roof had taken fire from sparks from the chimney. By the use of chemicals the blaze was quickly extinguished. The damage was trifling.

Paid $100 for Killing Doe.

Walter Heckel, residing between Loganton and Rosecrans, was arrested last Friday by John D. Ross, game protector, and George C. Harvey, a deputy, on the charge of killing a doe deer during the hunting season last fall. At a hearing before Alderman William Rathgeber at Lock Haven Heckel pleaded guilty and was fined $100 and costs, which he paid.

—and I'll Be Laid Up Several Weeks Longer

WHY, a brick fell from the third floor of a new building and connected with my head. In a hospital for a long time with a cracked skull, fever, delirious, and heaven knows what all.

But every month, regular as clockwork, along came a check for $200 from the ÆTNA. You see, my ÆTNA ACCIDENT POLICY calls for $50 weekly while totally disabled, $25 a week while partly out of commission, and also surgeon's fees or hospital bills. Makes it hard for me, eh? Man, I'm an optimist of the purest ray serene.

What did the policy cost? If I told you how little, you'd say I'm still raving. Come up tonight and I'll tell you. So long!
